Welcome NCSA!

In my role as President of the North Central Sociological Association (April, 2010-April, 2011), I would like to welcome you to the NCSA conference in Cleveland, Ohio. The conference theme is “Pragmatism in Research and Education” and its relevance to sociology today, not only in terms of sociological theory and methodology, but also in terms of practice and education. I hope we can carry on in the tradition of great American thinkers like Jane Addams, George Herbert Mead, John Dewey and, especially, Charles Sanders Peirce. I hope that this is an intellectually stimulating conference for everyone, but particularly for new attendees and undergraduate students. We are concurrently running an undergraduate conference as well, and that has been very useful and stimulating for many students over the years. Gail McGuire has been in charge of the North Central Student Sociology Conference and of course many students also participate in the NCSA conference itself. Daysha Lawrence has been our Student Section Chair. Melinda Messineo is the Chair of the Teaching Section and I am very happy that we continue to honor excellent teaching. Leslie Elrod has been the Chair of the Community College committee, a very important committee, especially in light of the Presidential address last year.

Cleveland is an especially important city for me because I grew up in Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland, between the ages of five and fifteen! So I am a Buckeye. Cleveland is often under-rated, but in the last few years the city has regained some of its rightful reputation as a city that rocks. (We can be quite sure the Cuyahoga River will not burn!) The program committee and local arrangements committee as well as our conference planner, Joyce Lucke, have worked very hard to make this conference a success. I would particularly like to thank Carrie Erlin, who was our Vice President elect, for stepping in as our new Vice President for 2010-2011 and taking on the enormous task of coordinating the program for this year, even though she will be doing it again for next year's conference in Pittsburgh (2012). Susan Alexander has been doing a terrific job with our newsletter and has helped to coordinate publicity, including mention of the Canadian Sociological Association (CSA). They are reciprocating with mention of the NCSA, but I do wish I could convince more Canadians to come to NCSA. The members of Council have all done their work without complaint, and if it was not for the volunteer efforts of a large number of people a conference like this would never materialize. Elizabeth (Betsy) Ross and Jieli Li were Council Members at Large. Betsy was also the local arrangements coordinator. Anna Linders and Kevin Christiano have continued to work hard as Treasurer and Chair of the Finance Committee, but also in countless other ways. The Scholarly Achievement Award Committee headed by Stephen Scanlon and the J. Milton Yinger Award Committee chaired by Bob Shelly have worked behind the scenes and it will be a pleasure to see those awards officially granted. Mary Senter, Jay Howard, Beckett Broh and Kathy Rowell should also be singled out for their work as committee chairs. Our undergraduate and graduate student paper competition is also a highlight of the conference for many people. Carolette Norwood was in charge of Student Paper Awards.

Professor Jack Goldstone has agreed to be our Plenary Speaker and many of us look forward to hearing what he will be saying. As a scholar with an international reputation he will make a significant contribution. Thanks to hard work by the publications committee our journal is going to change to a new publisher and we hope that the switch will result in more international recognition. I would like to thank Paradigm Press for all they have done for us in the past. I am sure that Gustavo Mesch will continue to do an excellent job as editor of Sociological Focus when we move to the new press, Taylor and Francis (Routledge). I would especially like to thank Kathy Rowell, our past President, for all her encouragement, and I will be glad to hand over the gavel to Larry Nichols, our President elect. Also, congratulations to our newly elected officers for 2012! This year Barb Denison has once again done yeoman's labor in keeping everything together in the very important job of NCSA secretary. The NCSA is a vibrant, lively association and I hope it will continue to function in many different ways as an intellectual, scholarly home with heart.

Sincerely,

J. I. (Hans) Bakker

Welcome to the NCSA 2011 Annual Meeting!

It is my pleasure to welcome all conference participants and honored guests to the 2011 NCSA annual meeting. This year's program includes many wonderful sessions on research and teaching, along with numerous panels designed to give both panelists and attendees a chance to discuss topical issues in Sociology.

This year's conference features Useem Plenary Speaker Professor Jack Goldstone, the John T. and Virginia E. Hazel Professor of Public Policy at George Mason University. We look forward to Professor Jack Goldstone's talk on Pragmatism and Ideology in Revolutionary Leadership, held Friday, April 1 at 4:30pm. Also of note is the North Central Student Sociology Conference (the NCSSC), an embedded segment of the NCSA annual conference. NCSSC sessions are scheduled Saturday, April 2 throughout the day, and are a place where undergraduate students can share their own original research in both a poster session and regular research sessions. Gail McGuire, Chair of the NCSSC, deserves our sincere thanks for organizing this segment of the conference for undergraduate students.

Other program highlights include a panel on NSF Research Funding Opportunities and Proposal Submission, scheduled for Saturday, April 2 at 9:30am and organized by Regina Werum of the National Science Foundation, and a panel on Preparing Future Faculty for the Range of Academic Jobs and Expectations, scheduled for Saturday, April 2 at 8:00am and organized by Jean Shin of the American Sociological Association. Our thanks to these organizers, as these sessions will likely prove valuable and informative to all attendees.

I would like to take a moment to thank those directly involved with putting the conference and its program together. Joyce Lucke, our Conference Coordinator, has been an invaluable resource in the planning and preparation of this conference. The Assistant to the Program Chair, Meg Campbell, has provided valuable help in planning the program and keeping track of the details that go into that planning. Without either of these individuals, this conference could not have been successful. Additionally, Alexandra Lamka, Convention Services Manager at the Hyatt Regency Cleveland, is also deserving of our thanks for her assistance with the logistical details that make the conference successful.

Lastly, I would like to thank all of the individuals who volunteered to organize sessions and panels and those who have brought their research and ideas to present during the conference. Without those willing to participate, there would be no conference at all.

I hope that you enjoy your time at the conference and the sharing of ideas that makes the NCSA a 'home' for many people – we are glad you are here, and look forward to seeing you at the NCSA 2012 conference in Pittsburg as well!

Best,

Carrie S. Erlin

Hello, and welcome to Cleveland, Ohio!

We are very proud to serve as the host city for the 2011 North Central Sociological Association Conference. Dubbed the "New American City," Cleveland is a must see destination. I encourage you to take time to explore what our vibrant city has to offer.

Whether you are intrigued to learn more about Cleveland's rich cultural history, powerful music legacy, diversity of ethnic neighborhoods or progressive-model civic involvement, we are here to assist you as you find all that is to be appreciated about our great city!

Currently, Cleveland ranks as the 12th largest metropolitan region in the U.S. and boasts a very affordable and alluring quality of life. As a powerful force in the world economy, our region generates $140 billion annually. Residents appreciate the vibrant arts scene: world-class music and theater productions, professional sports franchises, a great variety of cultural attractions and truly one-of-a-kind natural resources. As you may or may not know, Clevelanders are renowned for being die-hard sports fans!

As we teach and encourage our students the importance of pragmatism in research, and to engage with ‘the sociological imagination’, I hope you will find an opportunity to do this in Cleveland; perhaps attempt to comprehend all that has shaped and impacted the unique collective character and diversity found here.

During your stay in Cleveland, make sure to check out those places that intrigue you! There are discount tickets to the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame placed in each conference attendee’s welcome bag. Information is available about the 2011 Cleveland International Film Festival, The Great Lakes Science Center, the NASA/Glenn Research Institute, Little Italy, as well as local shopping, dining and cultural points of interest. I will be on hand to provide any directions and information you may need.

As they say, “In Cleveland, we have it all. Together.” Thank you for attending the NCSA Conference this year, and welcome to our great city!

Sincerely,

Elizabeth (Betsy) Ross

2011 Local Arrangements

Dear NCSSC Participants,

Welcome to the third Annual North Central Student Sociology Conference! This year we received 48 submissions from 54 students from 16 different universities and colleges. We hope you all enjoy the eight thematic sessions and 12 poster presentations. We have reserved the Smith Boardroom on Friday and Saturday from 7am to 5pm for students who need a place to work or meet. Don’t forget to check out the Alpha Kappa Delta (AKD) information table, which will be near the registration table located in the Burlington Foyer on the meeting room level.

I hope you take advantage of this opportunity to meet other sociology students and to feed your sociological imagination!

Have fun and enjoy the conference!

Check out the M.A. in Sociology Program at Ball State!

The Ball State University (BSU) Master of Arts in Sociology program is designed to prepare students for professional employment using analytical and research skills. We emphasize research methods, research experience, and analytical skills—skills that enable our MA graduates to find employment in government, nonprofit, and corporate organizations. In addition, the strong training students receive in theory, research methods, and statistics provides them with excellent preparation to pursue a doctoral degree in sociology. Ball State University is also one of only a few universities to offer a certificate in Institutional Research, which is a growing field, and sociology graduate students have the opportunity to earn this certificate.

Recent Ball State Sociology M.A. graduates have been hired as researchers and directors of Institutional Research offices at various colleges and universities, directors of social services, research analysts, statisticians, market researchers, and human resources personnel. In addition to obtaining good jobs after graduation, several graduates enter Ph.D. and professional programs at top universities, such as Indiana University, Notre Dame, University of Missouri-Columbia, and Purdue University.

Department and campus assistantships are available!

For more information, visit our department website at bsu.edu/sociology and click on the "graduate study" link or email the Graduate Director, Dr. Rachel Kraus, at rmkraus@bsu.edu.

The thoughts and hearts of the NCSA go out to the victims of the earthquake, tsunami, and nuclear emergency in Japan. We encourage those who are interested in doing so to donate to a charity of your choice that is helping provide assistance to the people in Japan. Although we do not endorse any specific charity, listed below are some charities that are currently working in Japan to provide humanitarian relief and aid.

Pragmatism and Ideology in Revolutionary Leadership (A Structuralist Revisits the Self)

Jack A. Goldstone
George Mason University

Revolutions are the arenas of ideology par excellence. Yet structuralists have drained much of the ideology out of revolutions, arguing that extremism is but a response to complex but decipherable social conditions. This should be welcome to pragmatists, who argue that commitment to ideologies, rather than to reason and self-examination, is responsible for much that is wrong in the world. But can one have a pragmatic revolution? Are revolutions ever pragmatically necessary? I will argue that, despite my structuralist approach, and a belief that at certain times both revolutions and ideology are needed, there is a critical role for pragmatism in revolutionary leadership. Indeed, I claim that a pragmatic and reflexive leader is a requirement for revolutions to produce democracy, while the ideological self, in which leaders come to identify themselves with the revolution, leads to totalitarian or sultanist outcomes.

Jack A. Goldstone (PhD Sociology, Harvard) is the John T. and Virginia E. Hazel Professor of Public Policy and a Senior Fellow of the Mercatus Center at George Mason University. He previously taught at Northwestern University and the University of California, and has been a visiting scholar at Cambridge University and the California Institute of Technology. He is the author of Revolution and Rebellion in the Early Modern World, awarded the 1993 Distinguished Scholarly Research Award of the American Sociological Association; and eight other books and over one hundred research articles on topics in politics, economics, and long-term social change. His book States, Parties and Social Movements (also available in Chinese) was named a Choice Outstanding Academic Title, and he has won the “Best Article” prize from the Comparative and Historical Sociology, Political Sociology, and Collective Behavior and Social Movements sections of the ASA. He has been a Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study at Stanford University and the Research School of Social Sciences at Australian National University, and has won Fellowships from the MacArthur Foundation and the American Council of Learned Societies. He has also received the Arnaldo Momigliano Prize of the Historical Society, and was named a Phi Beta Kappa Visiting Scholar for 2010-2011.

BSE5 The John and Ruth Useem Plenary Address St. Hubert
 Introduction by J.I. (Hans) Bakker (University of Guelph)
Pragmatism and Ideology in Revolutionary Leadership (A Structuralist Revisits the Self), Jack A. Goldstone (George Mason University)

Revolutions are the arenas of ideology par excellence. Yet structuralists have drained much of the ideology out of revolutions, arguing that extremism is but a response to complex but decipherable social conditions. This should be welcome to pragmatists, who argue that commitment to ideologies, rather than to reason and self-examination, is responsible for much that is wrong in the world.

But can one have a pragmatic revolution? Are revolutions ever pragmatically necessary?

I will argue that, despite my structuralist approach, and a belief that at certain times both revolutions and ideology are needed, there is a critical role for pragmatism in revolutionary leadership. Indeed, I claim that a pragmatic and reflexive leader is a requirement for revolutions to produce democracy, while the ideological self, in which leaders come to identify themselves with the revolution, leads to totalitarian or sultanist outcomes.

RENEWING SOCIOLOGY: LIVING TRADITIONS AND CREATIVE BEGINNINGS

Sociology, like other fields of learning, must continually reinvent itself in order to remain viable and relevant in ever changing social, intellectual and professional contexts. Through this ongoing process of renewal, the discipline is able to attract new generations of educators, scholars, activists and practitioners, while contributing to the quality of life in society. This dynamic has been evident in recent decades in many forms, including the emergence of new theoretical paradigms (e.g., postmodernism, the narrative turn) and methodological approaches (e.g., mapping, visual sociology), new sections in professional associations (e.g., sociology of emotions, cultural sociology), and the wide-ranging debate over “public sociology” and applications of sociological knowledge.

Such change, however, does not mean the wholesale abandonment of longstanding concerns in the field. To the contrary, contemporary sociologists, like their earlier counterparts in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, address the issues of social power, solidarity, social justice, and social change as well as the most appropriate methods of social scientific research and the best pedagogical techniques. As long as sociology endures as a distinctive field of learning, such traditional themes will remain crucial.

The NCSA invites its members and guests to examine the issue of renewal of our field at the 2012 conference in Pittsburgh. This broad and inclusive theme can be addressed from a multitude of directions that combine constructive critique with innovative proposals for the creative development. Within each specialty area, we can examine efforts to revitalize historical ideas, issues or methodologies, as well as efforts to launch innovative paradigms and practices. In the manner of Norbert Wiley’s “semiotic self,” we can dialogue with our past selves for the sake of creating a future identity. We hope you will find this an exciting prospect.
