2016 Welcome and Program Statement

Welcome to the joint meetings of the Midwest Sociological Society and the North Central Sociological Association-- a meeting likely to be the second largest sociological conference in the country this year. Bringing our organizations together for a single meeting, as we have done previously in 2007 and 2010, is always a great opportunity to reconnect with old friends and make new ones while reinvigorating ourselves by sharing ideas with colleagues.

The theme of this year's meeting is "Inequality, Injustice, and Intersectionality". One only needs to access your news of choice to see continuing issues of inequality and injustice that have been a focus of sociology since the earliest days of our discipline. Unfortunately these same media outlets often provide limited analyses and attempt neat and easy explanations which ignores the structural sources of such problems. This is why our theme is so important. We know the complexity of these issues. We know the cultural and structural sources of these problems must be highlighted. We know that matters that seem to be racial problems are also about class, and gender and, religion, and segregation. It is important that others come to know this as well. The works of both of this year's keynote speakers, Douglas Massey and Lori Peek, highlight the intersection of topics like ethnicity, immigration, identity, segregation, and economic inequality serve to highlight the value of understanding complexity.

The meeting will include professional development opportunities for sociologists at different points in their career and in different career paths. Meeting attendees will have opportunities to participate in workshops to build their teaching and research skills. High school sociology instructors will be here on the first day of the conference alongside an Alpha Kappa Delta mini conference. We also have scheduled workshops designed to assist those doing quantitative and qualitative data collection, and on the role of sociology in general education.

Finally we want to highlight both MSS and NCSA as organizations with long histories of supporting young scholars and helping them develop through the conference experiences. New faculty members, high school sociologists, graduate students, and undergrads as well often have their first conference experiences with our organizations-- it is important that we don't lose that element during these combined meetings. With that in mind, we ask you to please make time in your schedule to attend the undergraduate roundtables on Thursday and Friday, seek out graduate student papers and give them all feedback. Combined meetings like these are a great opportunity for professional socialization which will only make our discipline stronger.

We hope you enjoy your time in Chicago and take advantage of the program we've assembled. There are several unique workshops and panels that will highlight new innovations in our discipline and higher education in general, and of course the papers that are the heart of any conference.

Again, welcome and thanks for participating.

Session 27Kansas City, 5th Floor*Wednesday • 3:30 PM–5:00 PM*Teaching and Reaching Generation Z [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Amanda J Miller, University of Indianapolis

Generation Z, sometimes referred to as the “Digital Native” generation, is making its way onto college campuses in larger percentages than any cohort that has come before it. These students are often thought of as unfocused and able to engage socially only through a screen. What is less clear, is who these students are, what strengths they bring with them to the classroom and how we as instructors can best reach them. In this workshop, we discuss characteristics of this unique group and provide tips and tricks on how to best engage Generation Z in the classroom. Sponsored by the MSS Student Issues Committee.

- Katrina Reinhardt, University of Indianapolis
- Amanda J Miller, University of Indianapolis

Session 28Illinois, 6th Floor*Wednesday • 3:30 PM–5:00 PM*Critical Theory and the Everyday Life of the Theorist [PANEL]

Presider: Michael J Thompson, William Paterson University

Self-interrogations are the task of critical theorists who take seriously the ways our subjective positions in space and time mediate our interpretation of the world. However, in a hyper-alienated society, we often face the contradiction “that the better one understands society, the more difficult it is to make oneself useful within it” (Adorno, 2000[1968]:3). A common reaction is to experience cognitive dissonance and conform to demands made of modern bureaucracy in exchange for the securities they promise. This panel will discuss ways that critical theory both produces and confronts these issues and can be used in both guiding our research and our academic trajectories.

Session 29Ohio State, 6th Floor*Wednesday • 3:30 PM–5:00 PM*Diversity in Numbers, but Not Curriculum [PANEL]

Presider: Harriette Moore, Washtenaw Community College

Minority students at predominantly white institutions often have separate and unequal experiences. They feel isolated because of a disconnection between their cultural background and the academic curriculum; yet many white students see no value in being exposed to these communities for which they themselves feel no connection. While these institutions have worked tirelessly to diversify the student body, they have not diversified the canons of knowledge. This session aims to highlight the need for curricular diversification--contributions of authors of color and topics on issues that affect people of color. Sponsored by the MSS Minority Scholars Committee.

Session 41 Chicago Ballroom H, 5th Floor Thursday • 7:00 AM–8:00 AM

Assess and Destress: Yoga and Meditation I

Presider: Curtis Linhart, Paragon Personal Training

The session will begin with instruction on basic meditation and breathing techniques. Then participants will be lead through an hour long Vinyasa Yoga class. Vinyasa yoga can best be defined as “breath-synchronized movement,” and is a series of poses that will move you through the power of inhaling and exhaling. Vinyasa movements are smoothly flowing which explains why it is sometimes referred to as Vinyasa Flow or just Flow. Through several postures, participants will explore their strength, flexibility and balance. The class will be structured so that it will be accessible to all levels of participants. Curtis has been a personal trainer in the Des Moines area for the past 25 years. A certified Pilates instructor for the past 13 years, he rediscovered yoga two years ago and has since received his RYT 200. [Feel free but not required to bring your own mat.]

Session 49 Chicago Ballroom C, 5th Floor Thursday • 8:30AM–10:00AMGender and Leisure: Does Having Fun Challenge and/or Reproduce Status Differences? [PANEL]

Presider: Erin Davis, Cornell College

Panelists examine the gendered nature of leisure, the intersections of work, family, and leisure, the time and resource requirements as well as the rewards of leisure, and the ways in which leisure may simultaneously challenge and reproduce social differences and inequalities. We also address the literature on “serious leisure” by questioning if women are seen as (or allowed to be) “serious” about their leisure.

Session 76Chicago Ballroom B, 5th Floor Thursday • 10:15 AM–11:45 AM*Introduction to IPUMS: Learn to Use Freely Available Microdata for Sociological Research [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Evan Roberts, University of Minnesota Twin Cities

This session will cover the Integrated Public Use Microdata Series (IPUMS), the world's largest collection of publicly available individual level census data. These data include International and US Census and survey data, including the American Community Survey (ACS) data and Current Population Survey (CPS) data. In this workshop we will provide detailed explanations of the data available, demonstrate how they can be obtained free of charge through the web-based extraction system, and give examples of using the data in sociological research. For more information on the IPUMS, explore www.ipums.org

Session 77Purdue, 6th Floor*Thursday • 10:15 AM–11:45 AM*Interpreting Student Evaluations for Increased Learning [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Melinda Messineo, Ball State University

In this era of data driven decision making, it is important to think about teaching evaluations as more than something to be endured or weapons that can cause harm. Our challenge is to interpret the evaluations within a context of learning. We can use feedback received to inform our pedagogy for increased learning. This workshop will explore six common themes in student comments and provide interpretations of the pedagogical learning challenge that they may represent. Specifically we will focus on: clarity, alignment, student focus and the myth-of-multitasking, scaffolding, transparency, practice and metacognition.

Session 121Thursday • 1:15 PM–3:45 PM*TOUR: Hull-House Tour

Organizer: David Boden, Lake Forest College

Tour Leader: Susan Stall, Northeastern Illinois University

Hull-House, Chicago's first social settlement, was not only the private home of Jane Addams and other Hull-House residents, but also a place where immigrants of diverse communities gathered to learn, to eat, to debate, and to acquire the tools necessary to put down roots in their new country. We will tour the Museum, comprised of two of the settlement complex's original thirteen buildings, the Hull-Home and the Residents' Dining Hall. These spaces were used variously over the years, including as a nursery school, a library, and a salon for social and political dialogue. Jane Addams is considered by some to be the greatest sociologist of her day.

Organizer: Benjamin Drury, Morton College

Presider: Jay Howard, Butler University

Graduate school is full of wisdom regarding theoretical approaches to understanding our social world, advanced quantitative and qualitative research methods, and teaching and learning. However, when it comes to documenting success and failure in our classrooms using this wisdom we often fall flat. We will demonstrate strategies to: (1) design and utilize indirect and direct assessments in your classroom, (2) collect and organize your data, (3) include this information in your tenure packet, and (4) use the information to make data-driven decisions to improve instruction and student learning in your classes. Sponsored by the MSS Student Issues Committee.

Sociology Under Siege? - Roundtable Discussion with State Directors, Regional Reps

Presiders: Lee Miller, Sam Houston State University; Doug Hartmann, University of Minnesota Twin Cities

In several Midwestern states, sociology departments are facing cuts or even closure. In one case, social sciences have been removed from the core curriculum. It is clear that regional associations need to engage their members to campaign for our discipline. MSS State Directors and NCSA representatives will host state/regional tables for discussion about what is happening and ways to actively promote sociology within our institutions and to the broader public. MSS President, Doug Hartmann, will facilitate.

Human Trafficking: A Local and a Global Crisis [WORKSHOP]

Presiders: Aditi Mitra, University of Colorado at Colorado Springs; Mac-Z Zurawski, Chicago State University

Human trafficking is a complex phenomenon that spans history, gender and the globe in a variety of ways, including physical bondage and sexual victimization. It is both a local and a global crisis that requires a thorough study and investigation of the varied circumstances, causes, factors and actors involved in this modern day trade of human beings. Women and children are also notoriously affected by this growing epidemic. Presenters and organizers will create an expansive discussion on finding a solution to prevent the growth of this global trade and create “slave”-free societies. Co-sponsored by the Midwest Sociologists for Women in Society and the MSS Women in the Profession Committee.

Dedoose Workshop: The Evolution of Technologies for Qualitative and Mixed Method Social Science Research with Complex Data [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Eli Leiber, Dedoose

Dedoose is an intuitive, low-cost web-app for the management, integration, and analysis of text, video, audio, survey, and other data. Equally useful for those working from traditional qualitative or more comprehensive mixed-methods perspectives. Perfect for individuals or teams, students or experienced academic researchers in any discipline. Dedoose analytic features and interactive data visualizations support efficient and methodologically rigorous work. For the past 17 years, Eli has directed a UCLA research lab supporting work incorporating qualitative and mixed methods approaches and has built a reputation for developing creative strategies to maximize the use of resources and technology in social science research. This session will include a discussion on the history of technologies for managing qualitative and mixed method data, a brief overview on the history and driving forces behind Dedoose's development, and a tour of typical tasks in key Dedoose Workspaces. Participants will gain a fuller appreciation for the evolution of these technologies, a solid introduction to Dedoose, and a clearer sense of how the Dedoose platform and features can be of value.

Session 187Wisconsin, 6th Floor*Friday • 10:15 AM–11:45 AM*Study Abroad with a Focus on Service Learning: Theory, Practice, and Challenges [WORKSHOP]

Discussants: Fayyaz Hussain, Michigan State University; Maureen Handrahan, Michigan State University;

This workshop presents evidence-based tools to develop a study abroad program with a focus on service learning, as well as the Theory, Practice, and Challenges of such a program. In 2015, we took 28 students to Belize for study abroad program. We will share our experience with the attendees. Our discussion will cover the following necessary steps we took to start this program: 1. Planning 2. Development of the curriculum 3. Site visit 4. Need assessment of target group in Belize 5. Travel arrangements 6. Recruitment of students 7. Pre-departure classes 8. Assignment of students for service learning projects 9. Creation of Cooperative Learning Groups 10. Evaluation of students 11. Closing 12. Back to campus 13. End of the program and future links with the community. As a result of our discussion and hands on tools, we are assuming that participants will be able to design a study abroad program based on service learning model. The paper and discussion will be useful for professional sociologists, faculty, graduate and undergraduate students

Session 188Illinois, 6th Floor*Friday • 10:15 AM–11:45 AM*[THEMATIC] Trans in the Academy: Where Theory Meets Lived Experience [PANEL]

Presider: Charlotte Kunkel, Luther College

We have created a dialogue wherein we investigate the juxtapositioning of the lived realities of a trans woman and a gender theorist in conversation with each other, both feminists. We ask about implications of theory and pedagogy for lived experience as well as the importance of informing theory through subjectivity. We try to expose tensions and contradictions as well as common ground amongst positions in the interest of moving toward an equitable and just gender-neutral or gender-free world/society. Panelists will offer comment and critique before opening to the audience for Q and A.

Presider: Hara Bastas, LaGuardia Community College, City University New York

This workshop offers productive and practical strategies from feminist students and faculty to reflect on the strengths and challenges while pursuing a PhD, applying and interviewing for a faculty position at all levels, and maintaining a tenure-track position. The presenters will provide insights on their personal and professional feminist experiences shaped from both public and private institutions, in cities of multiple sizes and across multiple social locations. We invite others to join the conversation as we share our strategic forms of survival to continue the invaluable work feminists provide the academic community.

- Hara Bastas, LaGuardia Community College, City University New York
- Jacqueline Daugherty, Miami University
- Soulit Chacko, Loyola University Chicago

Session 220Michigan State, 6th Floor*Friday • 1:00 PM–2:30 PM*Designing Student-Centered Curriculum for Student Engagement [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Lynn H Ritchey, University of Cincinnati at Blue Ash

The ability to effectively design sociological curriculum provides us with opportunities to create unique student-centered learning environments. By designing curriculum we can decrease the trend towards standardization (all Intro texts are the same), increase student enthusiasm toward learning, and eliminate reliance on costly textbooks. We provide a brief overview of curriculum design principles and examples of learning modules. Participants will work to develop a student learning module using curriculum design principles connecting student learning objectives to course assignments and assessment.

- Leslie Elrod, University of Cincinnati at Blue Ash
- Debra Frame, University of Cincinnati at Blue Ash
- Tamika Odum, University of Cincinnati at Blue Ash
- Lynn H. Ritchey, University of Cincinnati at Blue Ash

Session 221Purdue, 6th Floor*Friday • 1:00 PM–2:30 PM*Teaching Beyond Lecture: An Introduction to Team Based Learning [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Kelli Chapman, University of Cincinnati

This session explores the use of Team Based Learning (TBL) and its integration into the sociology classroom to develop student engagement and critical thinking skills. TBL is an instructional strategy that uses collaborative learning and a structured sequence of quizzes and application activities to maximize student preparedness and accountability. This workshop will be conducted using TBL and participants will work in small teams and go through a typical TBL sequence. The session will cover the main principles of TBL, best practices, and a discussion of the benefits and challenges of adopting this approach.

- Kelli Chapman, University of Cincinnati
- Kelly Faust, Ohio University
- Elizabeth M. Lee, Ohio University

Session 222Wisconsin, 6th Floor*Friday • 1:00 PM–2:30 PM*Sociology and Careers in Today's Labor Market [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Barbara Keating, Minnesota State University Mankato

This workshop will explore the following: How may we help students identify and demonstrate skills developed through the sociology major that are marketable for a variety of careers from business to government to nonprofits to human services to social action? How may students articulate the sociological advantage for such jobs in cover letters, resumes and interviews? What characteristics are found in effective, informative Departmental "Careers in Sociology" webpages and in career-building service-learning projects, internships, volunteer work and part-time non- or para-professional jobs? Sponsored by the MSS Student Issues Committee.

Session 224Ohio State, 6th Floor*Friday • 1:00 PM–2:30 PM*Contextualizing and Gendering Sustainability and Social Policy [PANEL]

Organizers: Ligaya L McGovern, Indiana University; Isidor Wallimann, Syracuse University

Presider: Ligaya L McGovern, Indiana University

Sustainability and social policy conceptualization and implementation have contexts. The diversity in terms of culture, economic, political, ecological and social conditions among countries provide varying contexts. This panel session will explore issues, initiatives and responses relevant to sustainability and social policy in Asia, Africa, South Pacific, and Europe. It will present some successful initiatives to address sustainability issues, as well as the challenges in the process. Since gender and sustainability is still a neglected topic some members of the panel will address the issue.

Session 236Friday • 1:00 PM–4:00 PM*TOUR: Gentrification Tour of Chicago's South Side

Organizer: David Boden, Lake Forest College

Tour Leader: Chicago Center for Urban Life and Culture

Maligned for decades as a “vast wasteland,” and avoided at all costs by the tourista set, the South Side is rich in history and diverse in cultures, races and classes. From historic Bronzeville, made famous in “The Black Metropolis,” to the Stockyards of “The Jungle,” the 1893 World’s Fair of “Devil in the White City,” and Bridgeport, birthplace of four Chicago Mayors, the South Side has provided the lore and the pulse of the city in industry, music and politics. The transformation taking place around the stable, middle class African American communities of “Black Picket Fences,” which is replacing public housing with half million dollar townhouses will be incorporated in an extensive view of south side communities.

Session 241Michigan, 6th Floor*Friday • 2:45 PM–4:15 PM*Igniting Theoretical Imaginations: A Workshop on Engaging Undergraduates in Sociological Theory [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Susan Wortmann, Nebraska Wesleyan University

This workshop will provide participants with tools to engage undergraduates in reading, writing, and applying classical and contemporary sociological theory. The four workshop presenters collectively have over 25 years' experience of teaching theory. These presenters will provide an overview of their most significant challenge encountered followed by two rounds of break-out sessions that present a strategy, and elicit discussion or consultation. Materials including assignments and syllabi will be provided. Sponsored by the MSS Student Issues Committee.

- Susan Wortmann, Nebraska Wesleyan University

- Julie A. Pelton, University of Nebraska Omaha

Session 242Illinois, 6th Floor*Friday • 2:45 PM–4:15 PM*Neglected Theorists and Forgotten Voices [PANEL]

Presider: Christopher T Conner, Washburn University

This session examines social theorists whose ideas have been forgotten, lost, or misrepresented. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, W.E.B DuBois, Jane Addams, and many others were once marginalized or outside the sociological canon, and many others have been poorly understood due to translation errors, trends in intellectual fashion, etc. This session recalls undeservedly neglected work that still merits attention in fields ranging from pragmatist philosophy to symbolic interaction and critical theory.

- Christopher T. Conner, Washburn University
- John Paul, Washburn University
- David R. Dickens, University of Nevada, Las Vegas
- Harold L. Orbach, Kansas State University

Session 243Ohio State, 6th Floor*Friday • 2:45 PM–4:15 PM*Writing for Nonacademic Audiences [PANEL]

Organizer: Nancy Berns, Drake University

Presiders: Nancy Berns, Drake University; Joel Best, University of Delaware

Are any of your ideas worth reading? If so, do you know how to write in formats that people will take time to read? The scholars on this panel will share their experiences and insights on writing for a nonacademic audience and then open up a time for questions and discussion. Examples of topics to be discussed: how to write clearly for a general audience, how to frame arguments to interest nonsociologists, where to publish, and why it is important to engage diverse audiences. We will explore benefits and challenges of writing for the general public and publishing in nonacademic sources.

- Nancy Berns, Drake University
- Joel Best, University of Delaware
- James Holstein, Marquette University

Open Access and Open Education Resources in the Sociology Classroom [PANEL]

Presider: Stephanie Medley-Rath, Indiana University Kokomo

Textbook prices increased by 82 percent between 2002 and 2012 (US GAO 2013). These costs are causing students, parents, and administrators to apply pressure on faculty for their textbook selections. What can faculty do to keep textbook costs reasonable, while ensuring their textbook or readings maintain a certain level of quality and coverage? This panel will cover using open access resources, such as pieces from journalists and think tanks, and open education resources, such as from Wikibooks, OpenStax, and websites (e.g., Sociology in Focus, The Society Pages). Sponsored by the MSS Student Issues Committee.

MSS 2016-17 Board Meeting I

Session 275Chicago Ballroom A, 5th Floor Saturday • 8:30 AM–12:00 PM*Sociology's Place in General Education Curricula [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Larry R Peterson, North Dakota State University

Participants will learn about the current climate in general education and reflect on the state of introductory courses. What are the valuable sociological insights or skills that any student should understand after taking such a course? How do these insights or skills contribute to students' abilities to engage in "big questions" impacting the world today? Do shifts in higher education call into question the content of introductory classes in sociology? Should changes be considered so that they effectively address the educational needs of new majors but also of the broader general college audience?

- Larry R. Peterson, North Dakota State University
- Pangratios Papacosta, Columbia College Chicago
- Joyce J. Lucke, North Central Sociological Association

Session 276Wisconsin, 6th Floor*Saturday • 10:15 AM–11:45 AM*Ethical Issues in Teaching [WORKSHOP]

Presider: Lissa Yogan, Valparaiso University

The Society for Teaching and Learning in Higher Education has published a statement on "Ethical Principles in University Teaching" but since this is a Canadian organization and the ASA Code of Ethics says little about teaching, many sociologists are more aware of the ethics of research than the ethics of teaching. Presenters will review the two statements and present cases that examine ethical issues encountered in both graduate and undergraduate classrooms. Participants will examine and discuss possible ethical norms as well as methods of dealing with ethical dilemmas in the classroom and in their departments.

- Lissa Yogan, Valparaiso University
- Thomas Van Valey, Western Michigan University

Session 277Illinois, 6th Floor*Saturday • 10:15 AM–11:45 AM*MSS and Retirement: Society Support for and From Retirees [PANEL]

Presider: Susan Wright, Drake University

In 2014, a roundtable session explored ways in which the MSS might better support members who are retired or who are moving toward that status. A number of suggestions were submitted to the MSS Board. A Retirement Task Force, appointed by the Board, has developed a series of recommendations. This session will be an open discussion of ideas developed by the Task Force and provide an opportunity to suggest additional ideas. The Task Force will then submit to the MSS Board a plan for moving forward to better support and engage retired members.

- Susan Wright, Drake University
- Carol Jenkins, Glendale Community College - Arizona
- Gerry R. Cox, University of Wisconsin - La Crosse
- Catherine Fobes, Alma College

IOWA STATE UNIVERSITY

Department of Sociology

CREATING the next generation of SOCIAL SCIENTISTS

The graduate program prepares the next generation of sociologists and strives to prepare students for a wide variety of occupations, including faculty and administrative positions in academia, private sector jobs, and positions in government. Graduates learn and have opportunities to gain experiences in the practice of sociological theory and methods in their areas of specialization under the mentoring of a major professor and a program of study committee.

The Department offers MS and Ph.D. degrees in either Sociology or Rural Sociology. Graduate students may enter the program at the MS or Ph.D. level depending on prior coursework. At the MS level, an emphasis is placed on core training in theory and methods. For the Ph.D., the core content emphasizes advanced methodological skills, general theoretical orientations, and training in topical areas suiting students' research interests and strengths among faculty.

The Department scholarship of learning, discovery, and engagement are clustered around three central themes:

Agriculture and Development

Criminology and Criminal Justice

Social and Economic Disparities

M | SOCIOLOGY

Why Choose Michigan Sociology?

Our sociology program has been consistently ranked among the top three overall and is widely regarded as one of the best in the country. Among the leading programs, few can match our range of research styles, methodological training and theoretical orientations. We are known for pioneering research and training in survey research and quantitative methods. We are also a recognized leader in field research and comparative historical methods, thus offering excellent, rigorous training in qualitative methods as well.

What Sets Us Apart?

- Offers small classes that facilitate personalized learning and faculty mentorship.
- Assigns each incoming student a faculty mentor who provides advice and guidance throughout the course of study.
- Allows students opportunities to present their ongoing research to faculty and other students in a vibrant array of ongoing workshops.
- Provides opportunities to participate on departmental committees, in student government and in graduate student competitions.

Our program offers training in seven major subfields:

- Culture and Knowledge
- Economic Sociology and Organizations
- Gender and Sexuality
- Health and Healthcare
- Power, History, and Social Change
- Race, Ethnicity, and Immigration
- Social Demography

Department of Sociology M.A., Ph.D. Graduate Programs

Great Reasons to Choose Our Programs —

- Western Michigan University's Sociology (M.A., Ph.D.) programs provide an advanced understanding of the significant features and processes of human society through a focus on research and teaching.
- Graduates are well qualified for careers in research, evaluation, education, government, private enterprise, community organizing, and the non-profit sector.
- The Ph.D. includes a strong core curriculum in:
 - Comparative Sociology
 - Race and Ethnic Relations
 - Criminology
 - Research Methods and Applied Sociology
 - Gender and Feminism
 - Sociology of Religion
 - Power and Inequality
- The M.A. stresses both theory and method, while elective credits and a thesis develop substantive knowledge. A criminology concentration is available.
- Low faculty-to-student ratios and our diverse and distinguished faculty are recognized nationally.
- Generous financial aid packages are available. Students may receive two years of support at the M.A. level, and three years at the Ph.D. level.
- Ph.D. Students must have a M.A. in sociology or a closely related field and a GPA of 3.25 or better. M.A. students must have 24 semester hours in undergraduate social science with at least 15 semester hours in sociology.

Healthy Food Hub

Growing A Local Food System, Building A Local Food Economy

The Healthy Food Hub is an organization that organizes weekly markets and works towards greater food security in Chicago in general and in the South Shore community in particular. Its mission is to welcome healthier, affordable eating through collective buying. “By banding together to purchase food direct from farmers with healthy, safe food practices, we bring home healthier, fresher, tastier food for less. That is our goal.” For more information, go to <http://www.healthyfoodhub.org/>

Second Chance Renovations helps convicted felons reintegrate into society by training and employing them to do property renovations. Their mission is to employ, train, and empower individuals being released from the judicial system through the trade of carpentry. SCR buys distressed properties in areas that have been hit the hardest by the financial and violence crisis and renovates them to serve a positive purpose in their communities. “If we can employ these men and help them legally and meaningfully provide for their families, it will have a considerable impact in reversing the trend of violence and recidivism on our city streets.” For more information, go to <http://www.secondchancerenovations.com/>

Amnesty International is a global movement of more than 7 million people who take injustice personally. We are campaigning for a world where human rights are enjoyed by all.

What does Amnesty do?

We investigate and expose the facts, whenever and wherever abuses happen.

We speak truth to power and give hope to the oppressed, the tyrannized and the disenfranchised.

We mobilize millions of supporters around the world for campaigns like #RefugeesWelcome for the Syrian refugees and #MyBodyMyRights for women's human rights.

We support people to claim their rights through education and training.

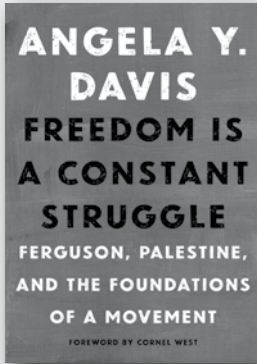

"The candle burns not for us, but for all those whom we failed to rescue from prison, who were shot on the way to prison, who were tortured, who were kidnapped, who "disappeared". That's what the candle is for."
- Peter Benenson, founder of Amnesty International.

Angela Y. Davis, Edited by Frank Barat,
Foreword by Dr. Cornel West

Freedom Is a Constant Struggle Ferguson, Palestine, and the Foundations of a Movement

In these newly collected essays, interviews, and speeches, world-renowned activist and scholar Angela Y. Davis illuminates the connections between struggles against state violence and oppression throughout history and around the world. Davis challenges us to imagine and build the movement for human liberation. And in doing so, she reminds us that "freedom is a constant struggle."

Keeanga-Yamahtta Taylor

From #BlackLivesMatter to Black Liberation

In this stirring and insightful analysis, activist and scholar Keeanga-Yamahtta Taylor surveys the historical and contemporary ravages of racism and persistence of structural inequality such as mass incarceration and Black unemployment. In this context, she argues that this new struggle against police violence holds the potential to reignite a broader push for Black liberation.

China on Strike Narratives of Workers' Resistance

China on Strike, the first English-language book of its kind, provides an intimate and revealing window into the lives of workers organizing in some of China's most profitable factories, which supply Apple, Nike, Hewlett Packard, and other multinational companies. Drawing on dozens of interviews with Chinese workers, this book documents the processes of migration, changing employment relations, worker culture, and other issues related to China's explosive growth.

Jan Rehmann

Max Weber: Modernisation as Passive Revolution A Gramscian Analysis

With Gramsci's theory of hegemony as his starting point, this volume provides a comprehensive socio-analysis of Max Weber's political and intellectual position in the ideological network of his time. Rehmann lucidly and witheringly argues that, even though Weber presents his science as 'value-free,' the forefather of sociology's system is best understood as an organic intellectual of the bourgeoisie advocating for a new model of capitalist hegemony.

Graduate Study in Sociology at Purdue University

The PhD graduate program in sociology offers generous financial aid to admitted students and a well-balanced curriculum with strong training in theory, quantitative methods, and qualitative methods to enable them to conduct sociological research at the forefront of the field.

Major subfields represented by the faculty: Health, Aging, and the Life Course; Sociology of Religion; Law and Society; Family and Gender; Social Inequality; and Social Movements and Political Sociology.

Our students are active in research with 49 journal articles published and 90 conference presentations made by graduate students between 2011 and 2014.

Our students find jobs in academia. A recent survey of our PhD alumni since 2004 shows that 70 percent are in tenure-track academic jobs, 21 percent are in research positions, and 9 percent are in other teaching positions.
