Welcome to the 2023 Annual Meeting of the North Central Sociological Association!

Welcome to Grand Rapids, where the rapids are, well, grander (I assume) than elsewhere in the state of Michigan. Come to think of it, the name of our host city derives from the Grand River right outside, so probably no evaluation of turbulent water was intended. But Grand Rapids is a wonderful place, as I hope all of you will discover while you are here.

It took the North Central Sociological Association some time to get to this city. Grand Rapids — which we have not visited before — was selected as the site for our 2021 meeting. The 2020-2021 President, Rachel Stein, and the Program Committee that year had great things in store for our members until COVID-19 refused to lift its grip on us. For safety's sake, that gathering had to be moved online. Rachel and the team made our virtual meeting a success in its own right, but as 2022's conference in Indianapolis with President Fayyaz Hussain demonstrated, staring at a computer screen cannot impart as much of the inimitable good feeling that is produced when we can join colleagues and friends in person to share sociology and sociality. This is merely one meaning of the theme for this year's conference: "All Together Now."

I have invited a longstanding colleague of mine in the sociology of culture, Geneviève Zubrzycki of the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, to deliver the Ruth and John Useem Plenary Address. Geneviève is the author of a series of award-winning books on religious and national identity. Her first, about post-Communist Poland, was The Crosses of Auschwitz (University of Chicago Press, 2006). This was followed by Beheading the Saint (University of Chicago Press, 2016), about her native Québec; and just last year by Resurrecting the Jew (Princeton University Press, 2022), about the revival of Judaism in Poland. Not only is Professor Zubrzycki a distinguished scholar, but she is a committed facilitator and organizer of research across intellectual boundaries and national borders, a topic that we ought to learn more about in her lecture, "International Sociology in the Age of Pandemic and War."

No NCSA president could accomplish a fraction of what is expected during his or her term without the often-unseen collaboration of many others in service to the association. While members rely on the regular appearance of opportunities to converge for discussions of teaching and research in the discipline, making such events happen actually requires a great deal of preparation, organization, and effort. Just a few who deserve to be acknowledged for their contributions to this meeting are Richelle Dykstra-Crookshanks, our Vice President and Program Chair; Michelle Jacobs, the Vice President — Elect; Greg Kordsmeier, Chair of the Teaching Section; Melissa Holtzman, who organized the undergraduate sessions; as well as Melinda Messineo, the NCSA Operations Manager; and Joyce Lucke, the NCSA Conference Coordinator. My deepest thanks to all of them for jobs well done!

Kevin J. Christiano
University of Notre Dame
NCSA President (2022-2023)

Welcome to Grand Rapids and welcome to the North Central Sociological Association's annual conference!

With more than # distinct sessions, keynotes, workshops, and receptions, we have an exciting program this year. Thanks to the wonderful submissions from faculty, graduate and undergraduate students, and practitioners there is a wide range of sociological scholarship focused on teaching, research, and applied topics; you are certain to find interesting and engaging sessions throughout the conference!

With the conference theme, All Together Now, many of our sessions focus on solidarity and engagement—in our classrooms and departments as well as in our lives and broader communities. You will also find a wide range of sessions focused on theory, methods, crime, family, sexuality, the environment, and so much more! In addition to numerous research sessions, this year's conference offers a number of teaching related sessions and workshops that cover a broad range of topics from diversity in education to tools for teaching.

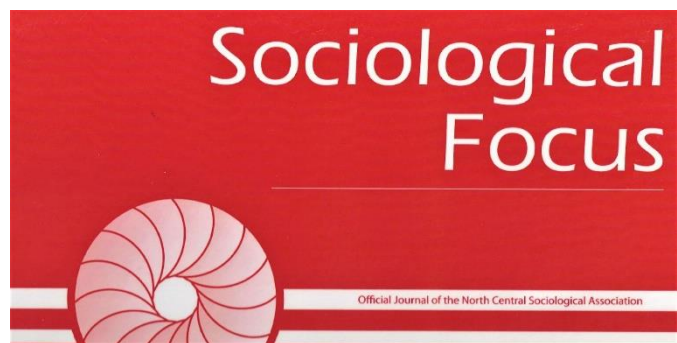

Additionally, I encourage you to organize your conference schedule around the various certificates that are available including the Preparing Future Faculty certificate and the Professional Development certificate. The certificate programs are designed to help upcoming and current faculty members explore ideas and practices that can be incorporated into teaching, research, and professional obligations. In addition to the research and teaching sessions there are many opportunities to connect with colleagues during the President's reception, the student section reception, the business meeting and awards ceremony, and the committee sessions. I encourage you all to join us for these events to take advantage of the mentoring and professional development opportunities but also to socialize and network with old friends and new within the NCSA community.

We hope you are engaged, inspired, and stimulated by the sessions offered here. Enjoy the conference!

MASTER'S DEGREE

Are you interested in research or data analysis?

Would you enjoy working for a state agency, non-profit organization, or institution of higher education?

Are you considering earning a PhD, JD, or MD but are worried about getting lost in the competitive environment of a large program?

If you answered yes to any of these questions, then I want to encourage you to learn more about how a Master's Degree in Sociology from Ball State University can help you achieve your goals. Our program is small enough to cater to your needs, yet rigorous enough to provide you with the skills that will ensure successful professional placements.

Our recent graduates now work at the Indiana Criminal Justice Institute, the Social Security Administration, and the U.S. Census Bureau (among others). And they have been admitted to schools such as Purdue, Penn State, Notre Dame, and Indiana University for advanced study.

RUTH & JOHN USEEM PLENARY ADDRESS
FRIDAY, MARCH 24 5:30PM Ford Presidential Ballroom

Geneviève Zubrzycki, Ph.D.
Professor of Sociology
University of Michigan
Director of the Weiser Center for Europe and Eurasia, Director of the Copernicus Center for Polish Studies, and the Director of the Center for European Studies

International Sociology in the Age of Pandemic and War

In her plenary, Dr. Geneviève Zubrzycki will discuss the specific challenges international sociology faces today and is likely to face in the years to come. While institutions of higher learning have all been affected by the global pandemic, border closures and travel bans have had a greater impact on some disciplines, fields, and approaches than on others. What is the future of field research, international collaboration, and international educational opportunities for our students? How can sociology rise to the occasion and offer answers to some of the world's most urgent questions?

Geneviève Zubrzycki is Professor of Sociology at the University of Michigan where she also directs Weiser Center for Europe and Eurasia and the Copernicus Center for Polish Studies. After receiving her Ph.D. from the University of Chicago (2002), she held a post-doctoral fellowship at UVA's Center on Religion and Democracy (2002-03). A comparative-historical and cultural sociologist, she has published widely on nationalism and religion; collective memory and national mythology; and the contested place of religious symbols in the public sphere. Zubrzycki is the author of the award-winning books The Crosses of Auschwitz: Nationalism and Religion in Post-Communist Poland (Chicago 2006, Polish trans. 2014) and Beheading the Saint: Nationalism, Religion and Secularism in Quebec (Chicago 2016, French and Polish trans. 2020), and the editor of National Matters: Materiality, Culture, and Nationalism (Stanford 2017). Her most recent monograph, Resurrecting the Jew: Nationalism, Philosemitism, and Poland's Jewish Revival was published in 2022.

In addition to her permanent position at the University of Michigan, she has held visiting appointments at the École des Hautes Études en Sciences Sociales in Paris and at the Netherlands Institute for Advanced Study in the Humanities and Social Sciences in Wassenaar. Her research has been funded by the National Science Foundation, the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation, the MacArthur Foundation, and the Society for the Scientific Study of Religion. In 2021, she was awarded a Guggenheim Fellowship and the Bronisław Malinowski Prize in the Social Sciences from the Polish Institute of Arts and Sciences of America.

Be sure to visit Grand View B to see a special display by NCSA graduate student, Stephanie House-Niamke. This display is based on her graduate research and was recently a featured exhibit at the West Virginia University Library.

Stephanie was the 2022 recipient of the B.A. Jones Minority Scholarship. She has been involved with NCSA throughout her graduate years, and served on the NCSA Council the last three years as the Student Section Chair.

Where Did Your Christ Come From? Exploring the Significance and the Prevalence of the White Jesus Phenomenon Among Black Protestant Women and Men.

Berger's theory of religion and world construction fails to consider the critical issue of power and who is allowed to construct their own reality and thus, does not adequately capture the experience of Black Christians and the Black religious experience. I use White Jesus as a case study to analyze this process. Though the White Jesus phenomenon has been more readily explored in theological and historical fields, very little sociological research discusses this phenomenon. I argue that a Europeanized Jesus has had harmful sociocultural effects on Black Christians and Black people, in the form of cultural trauma. Yet, the White Jesus phenomenon still persists in the Black Church. This study utilizes abductive analysis with 14 interviews and 1 focus group with Black Baptist women and men, finding that women tend to find the phenomenon less significant in their lives while men tended to be hypervigilant about the phenomenon and consider it more negatively impactful to the Black community. Many of the respondents who did not find the phenomenon significant tended to exhibit signs of kingdom-mindedness and colorblind ideology in their religious lives.

Introduction by Jay Howard, Butler U

All Together Now: Sociology as a Liberal Art and a Liberating Practice

Kevin Christiano, U of Notre Dame

In the curricula of colleges and universities in North America, the discipline of sociology is a relative newcomer. During scarcely more than a century since the founding of the first American degree programs in sociology, little agreement has emerged over what sociology actually is or does. Rather than regard this dizzying diversity as a source of confusion and consternation, though, might we ponder what would happen to us and our efforts if, instead, we were to view the many forms and aims of contemporary sociology as an irreplaceable advantage, and the practical pluralism that surrounds us in our work as a font of riches, embarrassing or not? Would not multiple visions thus be engaged at once? Could we not at last proceed, as the Beatles urged us, "all together now"?
